CLIENT DELIVERY SYSTEM

INTAKE

The gate — nothing starts without it

Owner: Devon. Nothing downstream starts until this is done.

Two pieces, and they do different jobs:

|                                | WHO FILLS IT               | WHAT IT CAPTURES                                                                                |
|--------------------------------|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| This document           | Devon, on the call         | Judgement calls — how they talk, whether they answer the phone, what they actually want more of |
| client-intake-form.html | The client, after the call | Logins, files, facts. The stuff only they have                                                  |

Send the form after the call, not instead of it. A form alone gets you facts and no understanding.

STEP 1 — BEFORE THE CALL (5 MIN)

Look them up first so you're not asking what you could have seen:

- ☐ Their website — does one exist? Is it any good?
- ☐ Their Google Business Profile — review count, rating, last review date, photos, category
- ☐ Their Instagram / Facebook — active or dead?
- ☐ Search [their trade] [their city] — where are they, who's above them?

Write down the one thing you already know is broken. Leading with a specific observation ("you've got 6 reviews and the newest is from 2024") earns more trust in ten seconds than any pitch.

STEP 2 — ON THE CALL (20 MIN)

Work top to bottom. Write their words down verbatim — don't tidy them up. This copy ends up in the film and the ads, and your paraphrase is always worse than what the owner actually said.

2.1 What they sell

- Top 3 services, ordered by what they want more of — not what they do most
- The one job they want more of
- The job they'd rather stop taking
- Price range per service (a range is fine, "it depends" is not)
- Average job value
- Typical timeline start to finish

Ask: "What makes you different from the guy down the road?" — write the answer word for word.

2.2 Answering [the section that predicts the outcome]

- Who answers the phone during the workday?

- What happens to a call at 2pm on a Tuesday when they're on a roof?
- What happens to a form submitted at 9pm?
- Do they text customers at all today?
- Voicemail — do they check it? Honestly?

If nobody answers, that is the first deliverable of the engagement and it changes the sequence. Fix it before spending a dollar on traffic. This section tells you more about how the pilot will go than anything else on this page.

2.3 Reputation now

- Current review count and rating — screenshot it
- Do they ask for reviews today? How?
- Any 1-star reviews needing a response?
- Other profiles: Yelp, Facebook, Angi, BBB, Nextdoor
- Ever been suspended or had reviews removed?

2.4 Video

- Comfortable on camera? Who's the on-camera person?
- Best place to shoot — shop, job site, or both
- Any job coming up worth filming?
- Do they want video ads, or just the brand film?

That last answer sets the ad channel. Video ads → Meta. No video ads → Google. See `06-traffic.md`.

2.5 Money and expectations

- Monthly ad budget they're comfortable with
- What does a win look like at 90 days, in their words
- What have they tried before, and what happened
- Are they paying anyone else for marketing right now? (overlap causes attribution fights later)

STEP 3 — BEFORE YOU HANG UP

1. Book the shoot date. On this call. Not later.
2. Confirm the single point of contact.
3. Send them the intake form link while you're still on the phone.
4. Set this expectation out loud:

"You'll see leads before you see rankings."

Local search takes months. Answering and follow-up work in week one. Say it now so month two isn't a disappointment.

STEP 4 — CHASE THE FORM (THE ACTUAL BOTTLENECK)

The form is where engagements stall. Every item below blocks a specific phase:

| THEY MUST PROVIDE                      | BLOCKS                  | PHASE |
|----------------------------------------|-------------------------|-------|
| Google Business Profile manager access | GBP fixes, review link  | 1     |
| Domain / DNS login                     | Landing page going live | 2     |
| Website admin (if any)                 | SEO audit fixes         | 1     |
| Logo + brand files                     | Landing page, ads       | 2     |
| Photos of finished work         | Landing page, ads       | 2     |
| Meta Business Manager                  | Ads                     | 4     |
| Google Ads account                     | Ads                     | 4     |

"I'll send it over" is how you lose two weeks. If they don't know their logins — which is normal — book 15 minutes to find them together rather than accepting the promise.

Photos are the one people underestimate. They're usually sitting on the owner's phone and they're the most valuable asset the business owns.

STEP 5 — KICK OFF

Say to Claude:

new client: [name] — and paste this completed doc plus the form response.

That starts Phase 1: SEO audit, treatment, ad concepts.

RULES

1. Don't start production on a partial intake. A missing GBP login on day one is a two-week delay on day ten.

1. Verbatim, not paraphrased, in 2.1. Those are the words that end up on camera.
2. Screenshot the review count before touching anything. It's your cleanest proof of work at Day 90.
3. The form supplements the call. It never replaces it.
