SEO AUDIT

What's leaking, before we build anything

Owner: Claude. Runs the moment intake gives us a URL. Output feeds three later steps, so do it before the landing page, not after.

This is the "Audit & Priorities" phase that `/how-it-works` already promises clients: "You'll know exactly what's leaking before we build anything."

RUN THESE

Every client:

/seo-audit https://clientsite.com

Full crawl, detects business type, delegates to specialists, returns a health score.

/seo-local

The one that actually matters for these clients — GBP signals, NAP consistency across citations, review velocity, local schema, service-area setup.

Add when relevant:

SKILL	WHEN
<code>/seo-technical</code>	site is slow, JS-heavy, or won't index
<code>/seo-schema</code>	no structured data, or it's broken
<code>/seo-content</code>	they have a blog or service pages already
<code>/seo-geo</code>	they want AI Overview / ChatGPT visibility

No website yet? Skip the audit, run `/seo-local` against the GBP alone, and go straight to building. Note it in the report so the Day-90 review isn't comparing against nothing.

WHAT THE OUTPUT FEEDS

1. The landing page (`04-landing-page.md`) — what's broken tells you what the new page must fix.
2. GBP fixes — categories, services, service area, NAP mismatches. Usually the fastest wins on the whole engagement and they cost nothing.

1. The baseline (`07-reporting.md`) — capture the numbers on day one. Health score, indexed pages, review count, current rankings. Without a baseline the Day-90 review is an opinion.

DELIVER TO THE CLIENT

A short written summary, not the raw dump. Three sections:

- What's leaking — plain language, no jargon. "Your site doesn't tell Google what city you serve."
- What we're fixing in the pilot — mapped to the 90 days
- What we're not fixing, and why — the things that don't matter for their business

Keep it to a page. The audit tool produces a lot; most of it is noise to a contractor.

RULES

1. Never send the raw tool output to a client. It reads as intimidating and unfocused.
2. Never promise rankings off the back of an audit. Report what's broken and what you'll do.
3. Capture the baseline before touching anything. Once you start fixing, the before-picture is gone.
4. Local beats technical for these clients. A perfect Core Web Vitals score on a business with 3 reviews and a wrong GBP category is worthless. Sequence accordingly.
