
CLIENT DELIVERY SYSTEM

LANDING PAGE

Structure, form, build steps

Owner: Claude builds, Devon reviews and pushes DNS.

WHAT ALREADY EXISTS — AND WHAT IT ISN'T

Checked the repo before writing this. Two different things exist and neither is a ready-made client template as-is:

FILES	WHAT THEY ACTUALLY ARE
demos/demo-hvac.html , demo-plumber.html , demo-salon.html	Visual references only. Hero, services grid, CTA band, footer. No form, no GHL wiring. Good for structure and styling; not wired for leads.
epoxy.html , pool-cage.html	Creatively Grow's own outbound tool — the "leak check" offer, posting to /api/leak-check . This sells Creatively Grow's services , not the client's. Do not clone this as a client page.

So every client landing page needs its own lead form built and wired. The demos give you the look; they don't give you the function. Budget for that — it's not a copy-paste.

STRUCTURE

One page, five sections. Do not build more; a contractor's landing page that's twenty pages loses to one that answers the four questions fast.

1. Hero

- Headline: the angle from 03-ad-creative.md #1 — same words as the ad that brought them here.

Mismatch between ad and headline is the single biggest silent conversion killer.

- One line sub-headline: the specific (service area, or the honest range)
- One button: the same CTA text as everywhere else in the funnel
- Background: a still from the shoot, never stock

2. The work

- 6–12 photos of finished jobs, real, from the shoot
- If pre-launch and no shoot yet: 3–4 from intake §5, clearly captioned with real job details
- Never a stock photo of a smiling stranger. It's the fastest way to look fake.

3. How it works / the process

- 3–4 steps, plain language, matching what intake said actually happens
- This section exists to answer "will they disappear halfway" — the fear from the treatment

4. Honest ranges

- Price range and typical timeline per service, from intake §2
- State it. Most competitors won't, which is why saying it is an advantage, not a risk.

5. Contact

- Form: name, phone, one-line "what do you need"
- Phone number, click-to-call
- Embed the offer spot here too (or the longer brand story cut, if one exists) — this is where undecided traffic lands

THE FORM — BUILD THIS PER CLIENT

Two ways to wire it. Pick one per client, don't mix.

A. Direct to their GHSL sub-account (default). A plain form posting straight to the client's inbound webhook. Simplest, and it's their data in their CRM from day one.

B. Multi-tenant page, URL-param wired — the pattern already proven on `review-funnel.html` and `client-intake-form.html`. One hosted page, `?business=&webhook=` per client. Worth it only if you expect to spin up landing pages fast and don't want a new file per client. Skip this for the first few clients — build direct until the volume justifies the extra layer.

Either way, non-negotiable:

- Submit button disables on click, shows a status message — no double-submits
- Success state confirms and tells them what happens next ("we'll text you within the hour")
- Never a dead end on network failure — same fallback pattern as `client-intake-form.html`

(fall back to a pre-filled `mailto:` rather than losing the lead)

- `robots.txt`: no `Disallow` needed here — unlike the intake form, you want this one indexed

BUILD STEPS

1. Pull the closest visual reference from the three demos, or start from the editorial system in

`creativelygrow-next/app/blog/blog.css` if the client's brand leans that direction

1. Swap in the client's brand tokens — colors, logo, fonts if they have them
2. Write the five sections from intake + the SEO audit's findings (`01b-seo-audit.md`) — the audit

tells you what the old page was missing

1. Build and wire the form (above)
2. Add the client's schema: `LocalBusiness`, correct `areaServed`, no fabricated `PostalAddress` if they're a service-area business — see the fix already made to `index.html` for the pattern

1. Mobile pass — most of this traffic is a phone, test at 375px width before anything else
 2. Page speed check — a slow page kills paid traffic before it converts
-

RULES

1. Ad copy and page headline must match. Write them together, not separately.
2. No stock photography, ever. Real work or nothing.
3. One page, five sections. Resist adding more.
4. State the price range. Hiding it costs more leads than it protects.
5. Test on a phone before launch. Not the browser dev-tools mobile view — an actual phone.